WELCOME TO KNEPP, A PIONEERING REWILDING PROJECT

Since we began rewilding in 2000s, wildlife has poured back in and endangered species such as nightingales, turtle doves and purple emperor butterflies are now breeding here. Herds of free-roaming animals - old English longhorn cattle, Tamworth pigs, Exmoor ponies and red and fallow deer - wander the landscape, their disturbance creating new habitats for life.

Beavers and white storks are undergoing successful reintroductions at Knepp. We are thrilled to be seeing these charismatic birds building their great nests in big old oaks and bill-clattering on roof-tops once again.

Knepp's rebounding ecosystem is a story of hope, showing how nature can bounce back if we let it.
